HE SIGHTED CERVERA.
Story of the Signal Boy Who Gave the Alarm at Santiago.
A perfect army and navy presupposes not only that all the individual members of such are courageous and capable, but also that they have the feeling of personal responsibility, are in thorough sympathy with the cause for which they fight and are devotedly attached to the country in whose service they are engaged. Probably nowhere else are those requisites more frequently met with than in the army and navy of the United States.
Joseph T. Gaskin is only a signal boy on board the Iowa, but had it not been for his unremitting attention to his duties, his keen sight and reflective mind, Cervera's fleet might have escaped uninjured from the harbor of Santiago.
Young Gaskin was on duty on the ship on the morning of July 3 and was watching the entrance to the harbor keenly. He was more than usually alert, as he had reported the night before that he had seen three distinct lines of smoke inside the harbor to the left, and he believed Cervera's ships were getting up steam, and, as he put it, "were going to make a break in the night."

He saw at 9 o'clock and reported the fact that the lines of smoke before him had moved toward the entrance. Fifteen minutes later he reported the same moving more rapidly, and of his accord prepared the signal number 2-5-0, meaning "The enemy's ships are coming," and made them ready for hoisting. At half past 9 o'clock he saw the first emerging warship, and reported the fact to the navigator, who ordered him to hoist the emergency signal. He did so, and the navigator said: "Sound the alarm, bugler! Sound general quarters!"
Then the battle was on.
The hero of this incident has his home in Newark, N. J., where he was educated. He enlisted in the navy two years ago as an apprentice, and has an elder brother on the Portsmouth.

Diamond Head
Has been photographed by every professional and amateur that ever came to the island of Oahu. Few of the new-comers know that it is called by the natives
Leahi, or the Circle of Fire!
The views that I have taken of this noble headland are finer than any that have ever been taken before—I make no exception. This I claim for ALL OF MY VIEWS, both because of the chemical work and the artistic conception of the subject.

CONTINENTAL ENLARGEMENT.

The Full Text of Gen. James H. Wilson's Notable Speech at Macon, Ga.

Fellow Citizens: It is with infinite pleasure that I address myself in words of peace to a Macon audience. [Cheers.] Thirty-odd years ago I came into this town with 15,000 cavalry thundering at my heels. [Laughter and shouts.] I was met with the roaring of cannons and the firing of musketry. [Cheers.] I was greeted by the burning of warehouses and the destruction of property, which I now profoundly regret. [Cheers.] The welcome that was extended to me then was of the silent quality. [Laughter.] An illustrious citizen, then your chief magistrate, the Hon. Joseph E. Brown, after a four hours' interview, speaking of me then, said to another gathering of illustrious citizens, at the head of which was Howell Cobb: "He is a clever young man, but gentlemen, he takes the military view of the situation." [Laughter.] That was a fact then, but now I come among you and I receive a different welcome. I was then a victor; today I am a captive. [Cheers.] I must say I am a willing captive of your city. The fair women and the brave and excellent gentlemen of your town have, by their open and generous hospitality, imprisoned me deep down in their hearts, and I would be recreant to every feeling of my own if I desired release from such pleasing bondage.
Now just one word more. The President has come among you; your President and my President, and he comes as the exemplar and the head of the great American nation. [Cheers.] He has done more for it than any President since the days of Washington, for he has added vastly to its extent and striven to make it a continental republic, as the fathers designed it to be. [Cheers.] He has extended its borders to such a distance that the sun rises upon it in the east before it sets upon it in the west. [Cheers.] Twelve thousand miles to the west lie the Philippines, our Oriental possessions, and 2,000 miles to the east the beautiful island of Porto Rico. A line joining one extremity to the other of these new possessions reaches half way around the earth. [Cheers.] But splendid as the President's work has been, there still remains greater work for him to do. It is glorious work, and don't you forget it. [Cheers.] It is work which justifies the President in saying we are at last one, and that the Confederate soldier should receive the same treatment as the Federal soldier. This is work which the American people are profoundly interested in, for it touches their permanent and paramount interests, and I hope to see it speedily accomplished.
I hope to see the day when our tarry flag shall float everywhere from frozen north to the sunny clime of Central America. We are too big and powerful and progressive to have neighbors on this continent, and I trust that before the next Administration of the President closes the flag will fly over every foot of the continent, from the northern extremity of the Dominion of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.
